A run in 'God's own Parish'

We meet at the car park at Le Hocq, where our hare, Software, was waiting to lead the runners around Gods own Parish of St Clement. Twin Peaks was stand in Hash Cash as Illegal was away in France on a recce for the upcoming bike bash.

We had a bit of a wait as a few hashers messaged to say they were stuck in traffic, possibly half of Jersey residents were heading to the beaches to keep cool.

After a wait GM Jacko was able to call the pack to order for today's announcements, Vital Statistics was offering recycled flower pots for any green fingered hashers and there was some discussion about who would be staying up to watch the England v Mexico in the early hours of Monday, Pervey and Captain Poocock assured us that would be up to lend their support Before leading off the runners up Le Hocq lane, Software informed the pack that there would be a little virgin territory, it was possibly a 'blink or you might miss it ' as it was a very short diversion to avoid the field of solar panels that adjoin the St Clement pathway.

The route lead along said pathway, passing the dolmen du Mont Ube, across St Clement inner road, down Samares lane and across the fields to the cycle/ footpath past Le Rocquier school, then into the meadow behind the parish hall where a feast of bread and cheeses was served up by our hare.

Meanwhile the walkers followed up le Hocq lane, on up Rue de la Houquette, across to la Verte Rue to find a way onto the St Clement pathway, however it was missed and the walk continued up to Clos de Roncier and onward to Rue Laurens where the pathway was found and followed until reaching the le Grande Route de St Clement. They returned to Le Hocq down Rue de la Houquette to join the runners for the on downs, where we also met up with Walkies and Chickpea who hadn't been hashing for a while.

There was only one down down today, for our hare, then it was time for hashers to head to the beach to cool down!
