

CRAPAUD H3 REPORT

Run No:	1921
Date:	8/11/26
Hares(s):	Ballcock

BY way of a change – not – Ballcock arranged for the hash to assemble at the statue of Harry Vardon near the Pembroke pub so that he could lead the pack on a merry dance around the only part of the Island that he seems to know intimately.

The run itself was, I think, Sub-variant 23b among the many routes that the hare has led over the years down in the far south-east. However, familiar as it might have been to the small but select pack, it was no doddle, weighing in at a shade over five miles.

Zach had brought along a friend, Simon, who lasted the course and certainly seemed to enjoy himself. We'll surely welcome him back if he chooses to join us again.

Because we had gathered on the nearest Sunday to the 11th of November, runners and walkers observed the traditional silence at 11am. Later in morning, we encountered the great and good of Grouville who were marking Armistice Day. We also passed the parish's tribute to the fallen in a meadow near the school. (See picture below.)

As usual, the Pembroke was a reliable venue for the on-downs, although Steptoe might have endured a moment or two of panic when he was informed that they were changing the barrel of the real ale so that it wasn't immediately available.

Again as usual, Ballcock's favourite pub – one must assume – produced a good spread of sausages, bread and chips. There was plenty to go around – which was just as well because a free-loading former politician, who shall be nameless, helped himself to a couple of our sausages without so much as a by your leave. Ah well, two less for Steptoe's hounds, I suppose.

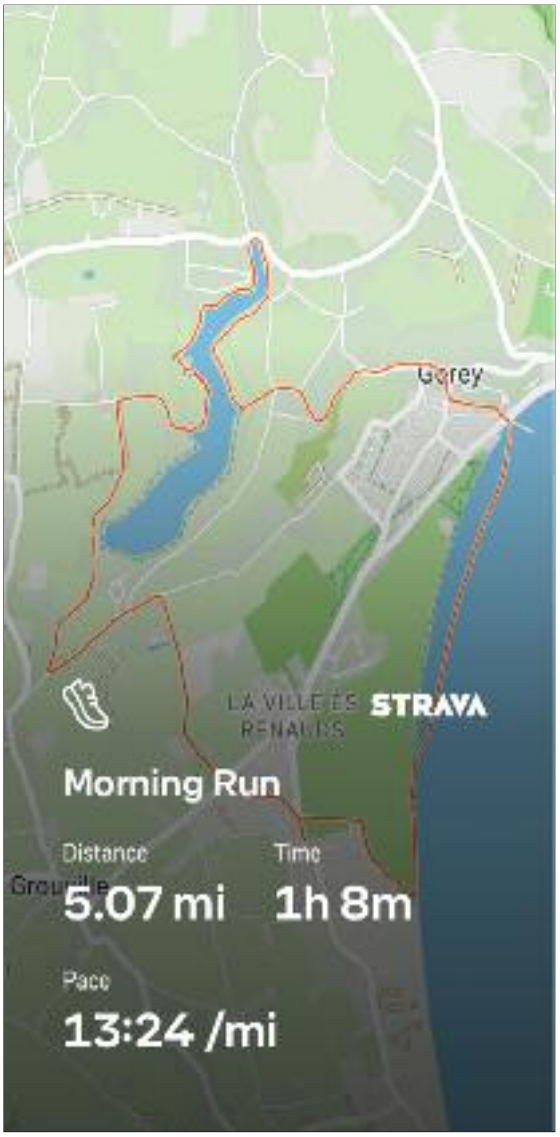

The hare and Simon, virgin of the day, were punished, together with Molehills, who had committed the heinous sin of being another year older.

Well done, Ballcock! Where to next time? Oh, I think I know.

On-on!
